

Thursday Oct 28

Came home very tired to night, but after sleeping and resting awhile I feel firstrate. One who has never tried it has no idea how fatiguing it is to listen carefully and think intently all day.

Supreme court. By working a little overtime we got in the last case for hearing on this October term calendar. In the morning the court took up the Kearney & Horton salary mandamus. The rest of the day was on State cases, just at present I am feeling much dissatisfied with the way cases are disposed of on hurried conclusions. We hear argument, then get around the consultation table and dispose of most of the questions, even constitutional ones, off hand.

Theatre. Ida, and Lora, taking Bessie, have gone to the Gladner to hear Maud Adams. May has also gone with Arthur Gifford.

Judge Stone said to day that he was born in 1838.

Weather very fine and a little warmer than it has been.
St. Julius A. Post, an old resident, died suddenly this evening while in a street car.
